House Members Study Labor Legislation

Series of Meetings Held to End Strike Problem in Defense Industries

By the Associated Press

A tentative draft of legislation to require a "cooling off" period before a strike could be carried out in defense industries included a provision for compulsory arbitration was studied by the House Labor Committee Wednesday.

Rep. Ramspect (D-Ga.) drew up the legislation under the direction of the committee following a meeting with President Roosevelt of House and labor leaders.

Under the measure during the so-called "cooling off" period, conciliation mediation would be carried out and as a last resort arbitration would be attempted.

Negotiations looking toward settlement of a general strike by 8,500 A. F. of L. machinists were at a deadlock.

This strike was described by a OPM labor expert as the most important and serious labor tieup anywhere in the nation.

The arbitration board appointed by the President held its first meeting in New York to try to settle the union shop issue in the captive coal mine dispute as another presidential board prepared to again discuss the rail-strike.

Philip Murray announced a proposal that Roosevelt immediately call a national conference of labor, industry and government "looking toward the voluntary acceptance of a plan which will assure peaceful solution of industrial disputes and guarantee maximum production."

Murray wrote CIO affiliates of the plan and said that anti-labor strike legislation endangered the defense program.

Sinkings Slow Navy Recruiting

Torpedoing of Destroyers Causes Decline in Recruits

WASHINGTON —(P)— Secretary Knox said Wednesday that the torpedoing of the U. S. destroyers, Kearny and Reuben James, with a total loss of life at 112 men had caused a decline of 15 per cent in the rate of navy enlistments.

The decline set in with the Kearny incident October 17 and was speeded up by the torpedo sinking of the Reuben James on October 31, but Knox said the tendency was toward returning to the old level of recruiting from 10,000 to 1,000 men per month.

2. "One Foot in Heaven": (a) Happy couple's honeymoon; (b) old man living on "borrowed time"; (c) small-town preacher; (d) romance in garret of a seven-story tenement.

Practical Good Neighborliness

There is a chance that the United States is over-selling its Good Neighbor policy in South America. Too many well-meant good-will journeys, too much emphasis on words and propaganda, too much talk, and not enough action.

Priorities have hit the Good Neighbor policy, just as they have hit a lot of other things. Many people south of the Rio Grande, anxious to order American goods, ready for once with hard American dollars to pay for them, have been told "Not now. We're busy with defense."

Much of Latin America is sympathetic with American foreign policy. The American defense effort is pretty well understood. Nevertheless, Latin patience wears thin just as quickly as North American patience. Unable to receive goods from Germany, such buyers depend absolutely on filling their needs from the United States. It is a golden opportunity. But to impose on circumstance, to assume that because Germany is for the moment out of the running (goods can be delayed and delayed) is to take too great a chance.

Further, these delays may hinder prompt delivery from South America of raw materials badly needed in our own defense effort. Thus, to deliver goods promptly to South America is just as much a part of the American defense drive as to make guns and planes for Britain.

A veteran Central American diplomat, sympathetic to the United States, and a delegate to many Pan American meetings, shook his head recently at the sight of a North American "good-will" party, and said "Sentiment is wonderful, but it's economics that count." And fortunately some North Americans, like Lieut. Col. B. Lord of the Economic Defense Board, are coming to realize the same thing. Said Colonel Lord, "You can send them all the books and moving pictures you want, but deny them goods or hold them up to exorbitant prices and it will be of no avail."

All this is just another proof of the "all-out" nature of defense in such times as these. The task is bigger than merely building ships and guns. It touches every phase of life. It implies producing and shipping to the markets of countries whose friendly co-operation is a necessary part of that policy. It implies actually increasing production and distribution at home of every product which does not interfere with the direct defense effort.

It implies that every step which strengthens the country and its people internally, and in relation to other friendly countries, improves its position in relation to those countries which are not friendly.

In England, drippings from roasting meats often are used on bread instead of butter.

Germans Move Nearer to the Soviet Capital

Vichy Sources Say Thrust Carries to Within 16 Miles of City

MOSCOW —(P)— A heavy German force of tanks, planes and infantry has broken through the Stalingrad sector, east of Tula and advanced to the outskirts of the town of "V" a Pravda broadcast said Wednesday.

"From there," the Communist party organ said, "some German forces have swung back to the west in an attempt to encircle Tula by cutting off the highway near Serpukhov, 50 miles south of Moscow."

The newspaper said a decisive battle was shaping up in the whole Tula region.

A Vichy broadcast heard by NEC said Nazi mechanized forces had broken through southeast of Klin and were now only 25 kilometers—approximately 16 miles—from Moscow.

The Russians were said to be fighting hard to prevent a further advance in that area where German forces are concentrated to continue the offensive despite heavy losses.

"German attacks in the areas west and southwest were beaten back," said Pravda. However, it was conceded that the Germans occupied several villages.

Tass, Russian news agency quoting the newspaper Izvestia, said fierce engagements persisted Tuesday on the southern front with Russian troops dislodging Germans from new lines where they were trying to entrench.

British Tank Force Said to Be Annihilated

Apparently Tobruk Garrison Only British Force Making Progress

By the Associated Press

Axis front line dispatches declared Wednesday that British troops south of Rezegh, scene of a 3-day battle of massed tanks, had been encircled and "annihilated" with more than 5,000 prisoners captured and German military quarters stated flatly that the Libyan desert was no longer regarded as a British offensive.

Rezegh is 10 miles south of Tobruk.

The British Middle East command said the Germans had rushed up reinforcements to Rezegh and that a big battle was expected there momentarily.

Tobruk Garrison Advances

A Cairo bulletin reported that the British Tobruk garrison smashed deeper into Axis siege lines and said strong British tank reinforcements, previously held in reserve, were now moving into the forward battle line to bolster other columns which were reorganizing for a new attack.

Long Fight Expected

Other dispatches indicated that the British expected a lengthy struggle. As the battle raged into the ninth day even British reports reflected a sharp setback to earlier hopes for a lightning sweep to knock the Axis out of North Africa.

From Cairo, headquarters of the Middle East command, came the acknowledgment that the Germans were rallying from the first surprise shock of the British counter offensive, and had seized the offensive in some sectors and that trapped Nazi forces were "fighting savagely" to break through the British lines.

LADY BY REQUEST

By HELEN R. WOODWARD

THE STORY: Pretty, very Diana Tucker's former father has given her consent to her marriage with Stephen Curt, famous writer and commentator, even though he knows that it is a temporary marriage that will pay Diana $10,000—her remuneration for saving her father a $20,000,000 inheritance. She will lose it if she does not marry before he is 35. Diana accepts the offer and the wedding is set for the 28th. Stephen has told her the woman he loves is married to another man who does not want to go back to the farm and marry child. Head sweetest Bill Jackson, and the city because she realized the advances of Richard Thorne, her employer. Bill likes Stephen's stepmother, Elsie Curt. A temporary six months' marriage—how will it work out for the beautiful, excited young girl?

DIANA MEETS PHIL

CHAPTER VIII

TWO days later Diana and Stephen were married. They had planned it all on the trip back up to the city. He insisted on taking her to the Clarendon, rather than back to her rooming house.

"You'll be more comfortable," he said. He gave her a generous check "for expenses" and said, "We'll call it an advance if you like," when Diana protested.

She had never had so much money of her own in her life. Five hundred dollars! She would have laughed if she'd known that Stephen feared it might not be enough, but was diffident about offering her more. The hotel room with its shining bath was the last word in luxury. She put herself in the hands of the hotel beauty experts and emerged with her red-gold hair done in a new, slightly more sophisticated manner as would be becoming to the wife of Stephen Curt. A pompadour in front with soft curls behind in the Gibson girl manner.

Then she went shopping for a wedding outfit. She finally decided on a Como blue coat in needle-point fabric, very slim and elegant, with a full-length, buttoning of lipped skirt. A simple blue shirt-waist frock, beautiful accessories in a deeper blue. The kind of things she had always longed to buy. She also found a black dress in sheer woolen with a softly-draped, criss-crossing bodice. Filmy underwear, hose and cosmetics.

On their wedding morning a bleak wind blew steadily and sudden flurries of wet snow fell at intervals. Dressing, Diana reflected that if the old saying "happily is the bride the sun shines on" were true, there were indeed stormy days ahead for her and Stephen Curt. She knew she looked dashing in her new outfit and that helped. She wished suddenly for her mother and father, but it had been agreed to keep the wedding quiet. Stephen was not even bringing his sister, Adela, and old Ellen Curt was not coming. Stephen had asked a friend—one whom he could trust. They were waiting for her in the lobby when she went down—Stephen and his friend, Philip Bruce. They'd been boyhood chums, college mates and were closer than brothers.

Diana wondered what she was going to think of Phil Bruce, for he was looking into her eyes with a strange intensity. He wasn't quite as tall as Stephen, but so straight that he gave the appearance of height. Broad shoulders, slim waist, unruly brown hair, laughing brown eyes. They whisked her out to a taxi and soon reached the city hall. Stephen had made all arrangements and Judge Cavendish was waiting for them, but Phil dashed away and they had to wait for him. He came presently carrying a small florist's box.

"I had to see the bride before I knew what flowers to buy," he said. "Damn!" said Stephen crossly. "I never even thought of it. Forgive me, Diana."

"Oh, well, you've never been married before," said Phil airily, throwing tissue paper right and left. "Now at my last wedding—" he broke off, having brought into view a tiny, adorable, old-fashioned bouquet, lace trimmed. Roses and valley lilies and myrtle. Sentimental and silly and very lovely. Like a dear, remembered valentine from childhood.

"Nothing garish or flamboyant for you, darling," he said, "something sweet and dainty and lovable!" His brown eyes met hers as he placed the flowers in her hands. She thanked him, a lump in her throat which she strove valiantly to swallow. "Well, let's get going," said Stephen a little brusquely. The ceremony was simple and soon over. Diana, listening to those matchlessly beautiful words, trembled a little. People should be punished for making a mockery of them. Would she be punished?

HE was in love with another woman. He wouldn't mind having Diana about, they'd be friends, but he wouldn't feel badly at parting. She saw herself through the years, going to Stephen for advice, still being friends. When she went into her little business, he'd help her get started.

It wouldn't be like that with Phil Bruce. It wouldn't be safe to marry him for convenience. You could tell that by looking into his deep, ardent eyes.

Phil took them to the Savola for a wedding luncheon. Diana laughed a lot and talked a little feverishly. Stephen remembered once thinking she'd be like a child when she was happy. She was happy now and very much excited. Her face was exquisitely flushed and Phil Bruce could not take his eyes off her. Stephen saw that, too. What a couple they'd make, he was thinking—youth, gay and warmly ardent. But Diana was his, Stephen's wife for a time at least. She'd have to remember that. Even Phil Bruce mustn't interfere.

He rose when they had finished luncheon and took Diana firmly by the arm, bundled her into her coat, led her gently from the room, Phil trailing behind. "Now you run along," Stephen said to Phil. "Your part of the ceremony is over. We'll be seeing you."

Diana barely had time to call, "Thanks for everything!" before Stephen whisked her away. "Where do we go from here?" she demanded, a little giggly.

"I'm taking you home," he said. "I want you to get settled and meet my sister, Adela." Inside the cab he turned to her. "I could see that you and Phil were attracted to each other. That will be all right after the divorce. I'll give you both my blessing. But I must remind you that while we are married you must to all appearances be truly my wife."

Diana sat back with a sudden swift jolt. Anger flashed into her eyes. "Don't be absurd! You know I only met the man this morning!"

"I know Phil," Stephen said dryly. "He's always going off the deep end about some woman. Just keep him in his place!"

"Thanks—for the warning," she said stiffly, humiliated. Was he protecting his friend, or her? "You needn't worry about me," she said fiercely. "I'll remember that I'm being paid for this!"

There it was—that flashing fire that had so appealed to him. Amusement tugged at the corners of his lips. Poor kid—he mustn't make it hard for her. And ruefully he admitted to himself that he had been sounding exactly like a jealous husband.

Soil Building AAA Program

Final Date for Practices Is November 30

The final date for completing soil building practices under the 1941 AAA Program is November 30, according to B. E. McMahon, County Administrative Officer.

A large number of farmers in Hempstead County have not completely earned their soil building allowance. We have on hand approximately 450 sacks of triple superphosphate which farmers can use toward earning their soil building allowance for 1941. This material may be applied to winter legumes and pastures.

Producers needing phosphate should call for this material immediately, in order that they may get it out by Saturday of this week.

1. If you make several local telephone calls on the room telephone of a friend at a hotel, should you pay him for the calls?
2. If you want friends who live in a city where you are stopping overnight to feel they need not ask you to stay with them, should you telephone before or after registering at a hotel?
3. Should a maid be taught to say, "Dinner is ready" or "Dinner is served"?
4. When writing a thank-you note for a gift is it best to mention the gift by name?

grid battle, on Williams Field, beginning at 2 p. m.

Personal letters from President J. R. Grant, mailed to parents of all present Ouachita students, have met with large response, and with the weather prospect good, the attendance is expected to be record-breaking.

While the football game will have no bearing on the state championship, the Ouachita Tigers having won a clear title to the state laurels by defeating the Arkansas Tech Wonder Boys here last week, the intense rivalry between the Tigers and the Reddies can be counted on to provide the fans with a thrilling game.

The Tigers have not seen their goal line crossed this season by an Arkansas team, and will be fighting to live up to their prestige as newly-crowned champions. On the other hand, the Reddies will be pointing for a victory to lift themselves out of the cellar in the state this season.

From 10 a. m. till noon, the visitors will be conducted on tours of the campus.

Reigning over the day's activities will be Miss Mildred Skinner, of Locksburg, Ouachita Queen, and Mrs. Dan Nell, wife of Henderson State's left halfback, Henderson Queen.

Seven Tigers will be playing their last official game for the Purple and Golds. They are: Joe D. Gault, Dardanelle, end; Charles Taylor, Newport, guard; J. Ramsey, Bauxite, tackle; Ralph Turner, Newport; Morris Moore, Danville, back; Bernard Anderson, North Little Rock, back; and Jack McHaney, Smackover, back.

Sen. Pilkinton Speaks Here

Tells Kiwanis Importance of Xmas Seal Sales

Senator James H. Pilkinton, chairman of the speakers committee for the Hope Christmas Seal campaign, told the Hope Kiwanis Club Tuesday that, one out of every four young women who die between the ages of 21 and 25 die of tuberculosis. He said that if more could be given to the Christmas Seal fund in preventing tuberculosis and education in health, the state could be saved many thousands of dollars expended in maintaining sanatoriums, etc.

Appealing to Kiwanians and all citizens of Hope and Hempstead county to support the present Christmas Seal campaign headed by Talbot Field, Jr., county chairman, and the Rev. J. E. Hamill, city chairman, the senator said, "It takes money to sponsor any worthwhile project. And any money spent on Christmas seals is one of the finest investments possible."

City Chairman J. E. Hamill announced at the Tuesday Kiwanis luncheon that the personal solicitation undertaken this year by the Kiwanis Club, will get underway next week with Royce Wolsenberger as chairman.

Fice Chief Jim Embree was introduced by President Ched Hall as a new member in the club.

Scramble For Buttons

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS FIELD FORCE FOUR—(P)—Most eagerly sought collector's items among United States soldiers and marines here in Iceland are buttons and regimental insignia of various British units stationed in Iceland. Each has definite value. A cap badge of the Durham Light Infantry is worth two picket buttons of an American infantry regiment while the regimental insignia has similar value to RAF British navy and army.

One marine private said he'd already collected 32 different type buttons, badges and other insignia from different British units.

It is not unusual to see three or four British and Americans seated around a cafe table appraising each other's buttons as seriously as diamond merchants examining a rare stone.

Guard Armory Goes Up Fast

24,500,000 Men Registered by Draft in 1917

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON — The new District of Columbia National Guard armory is as big as all out-doors and in its vast interior, curling upward like a zepplin hangar, is going on one of the greatest destruction jobs of all time.

There the records of 24,500,000 men who registered in the World War I drafts in 1917 and 1918, except only those 3,500,000 who were inducted, are being chipped into waste paper.

In these days of billions, the destruction of a mere 2,000,000 folders of reports, letters, questionnaires, etc., may not seem like a big job. But when you consider it is terms of 20,000 chin-high steel filing cabinets, which, according to the estimate of one mathematical reporter, would stretch 50 miles if placed side by side, or cover ten acres if huddled solid, you begin to get some idea of the magnitude of the task.

The destruction of the confidential files which have figured in numerous lawsuits, claims and proofs of citizenship, is just another chapter in Washington's mad search for office space to accommodate the expansion of World War II personnel. The files once were housed in seven buildings (ten acres, remember) on the grounds of the Army War College. When defense got under way and War College began bursting out of its quarters, the War Department asked if something couldn't be done to clear those seven buildings.

The matter was put up to the then Archivist R. D. W. Connor. Connor's fine new building, with all its millions of cubic feet of filing space, was already running over. There was nothing else available. To get rid of the files of those 21,000,000 who never served seemed the only out.

It took an act of congress, and hearings before committees to get authorization for eliminating this bulk of paper. The Social Security board and the Justice Department's Immigration and Naturalization Service both had representatives on hand to say that they could get along without the records. Sorriest to see them go will be the insurance companies for files have proved records in thousands of suits and applications for those firms.

The first idea after the bill passed in late summer, was to burn the records but before the job was under way, the paper shortage began to

Peanut Acreage to Increase

'Food for Freedom' Campaign Starts in Hempstead

Farmers of Arkansas in increasing their peanut acreage from 21,000 to 51,000 acres for oil and edible trade will not only be following recommendations of the state USDA defense board as a part of the national "food for freedom" campaign but should be in a position to increase their income, H. Earl King, chairman of the Hempstead County USDA defense board, said.

Peanut acreage in Hempstead County this year was 630 acres and the goal for next year as set by the county defense board is 1200 acres.

Fair prices and increased demand for peanuts are expected to continue next year due to the important role peanut oil is playing in national defense.

The state goal for peanuts next year is 46,000 acres for oil and 5,000 acres for nuts compared with total acreage of 21,000 acres this year.

Increased acreage of peanuts for look like something worth considering. Now 100 WPA clerks (most of them over 50 years of age) work all day sorting the 21,000,000 from the 3,500,000 who were inducted (these records must be saved, of course) and feeding them into hoppers where they are carried off to the basement of the armory.

There the records are poured into a big chopper which shreds them beyond any possible recognition—since one of the legal stipulations of the gathering of the records in the first place was that they were to be strictly confidential. After that the shreds are baled and sent away to the reservoirs being built up against that time when a paper shortage might occur.

An interesting fact is that in spite of the size of the new armory (not being used for its original purpose until the District's National Guard comes back from training or whatever is to follow) it is too small to hold all the files. Thousands of them were stored in Fort Washington, down the river, and all day long a battery of Army trucks bring up full ones to take the place of those that are being emptied.

What are they going to do with the empty filing cabinets? I suspect they will use them for the records of the boys who register for the draft in World War II.

Individual farms is expected to be indicated on farm plan sheets to be executed by all farmers in the county during November. Each farmer will be asked to indicate the increased acreage he expects to devote to various crops needed in the national food campaign. Other crops for which increased production is needed in Arkansas include oats and soybeans. Increased egg production is also requested.

We, the Women

Couples Must Take Boom Pay With Grain of Common Sense

By RUTH MILLETT

While national defense is responsible for holding up a lot of marriages—those of draftees and of boys anticipating being drafted in the near future—it is also directly responsible for a boom in marriages.

There wasn't any chance for Mary and Joe to marry until the defense industries started up. Joe didn't have steady employment and Mary, untrained, could not have earned more than a few dollars a week if she could have found work to do.

Now Joe has a job in a defense plant and is making more money than either have ever seen before. So they are marrying.

If they can just remember what things have been like for them during the past five years, they will look on Joe's big weekly pay envelope as a mighty good thing, but something not likely to last forever, or even for more than a very few years.

Dear Your Married Life on a Long-Range Plan

And they will wear their living accordingly. Even a year ago they would have been delighted to be able to get married and live in two rooms, see one picture show a week, forgetting worries about not having a car. If they can just keep that picture in mind, and not improve on it too much when they set up housekeeping now, they can really make this period a time for getting ahead and getting themselves established as a family unit—rather than doing as many in their position are now doing—spending every cent they make on extravagant living, and going into debt for things still beyond their reach.

If Mary is smart she'll even figure how to get a course of training that will fit her for a job out of the money that she is earning in now. Invest Surplus Funds in Work Training. Then if hard times come suddenly, she'll be able to help with earning living. Also, she'll see that the things they buy actually make for better living, not just for show.

If they entirely forgot what life was like even a year ago and spend every cent Joe makes without any thought of the future, they may find that going back to little after throwing money around is harder even than having little in the first place.

Of course, they may never have to go back—but they will be building their marriage on a firmer foundation if they assume they will—until time proves otherwise.

Radio Stars and Comics Are in Cast of Mirthful Movie

Meet the people who own the voices you know so well. This is the inducement offered by Universal's "Swing It, Soldier," which opens Thursday at the Saenger theater with a galaxy of radio stars whose voices are known to millions.

Heading the all-celebrity cast are Bob Murray and Frances Langford, the latter in two roles for good measure. Other headliners include Don Wilson, jovial announcer of the Jack Benny radio show, and Hanley Stafford, best known as the harassed "daddy" of the "Baby Snooks" act.

In addition to these favorites are Brenda and "Cobina," famous psin-tronics from the Bob Hope show; "Senior Lee," Iris Adrian, Susan Miller and Skinny Ennis with his band.

Appropriate Roles
All of the radio celebrities will be in roles fitting the personalities they have established on the air. Murray plays a breezy, likeable leading man; Miss Langford and Miss Miller sing several songs between them, each in her own style; Wilson plays just the sort of person his air fans believe him to be and Stafford plays his well-known role of a humorous man on the verge of a nervous breakdown. "Brenda" and "Cobina" impersonate their famous unsought and avid spinners, and "Senior Lee" plays the familiar confused Latin comic. Skinny Ennis plays himself.

There are almost a dozen songs, including old favorites associated with Miss Langford, old songs sung new by Miss Langford or Miss Miller, and songs written for the picture, among them the sensational "Rug-Cut-Rug."

Also Secrets of the Lone Wolf, with Warren Williams, Ruth Ford and Eric Blom.

"NAVY INTELLIGENCE"

Is it necessary to be a high school graduate in order to enlist in the Navy?

No. Navy enlistees need not be high school graduates. All applicants will be given an examination containing approximately 100 questions. A grade of 75 per cent or better on this examination is sufficiently high to pass the Navy educational standards. However, a high school education will be valuable to the seaman during his Navy enlistment.

If I enlist in the Navy or Naval Reserve, will I be sent to a Navy Trade School?

All new recruits are sent to one of four Naval Training Stations and after a training period they may take examinations for entrance into Navy Trade Schools. Those recruits who pass their examinations with sufficiently high grades are sent to Navy Trade Schools before assignment to the fleet. While attending these schools, they will receive regular Navy pay and free schooling valued at $1500.

What is the greatest possible pay I can expect to earn during my first term of enlistment?

It is possible to earn as much as $126 a month by the end of your first term of enlistment, and remember that your lodging, medical and dental care are all supplied free.

After I have served my term of enlistment, what benefits do I get for re-enlistment?

Depending on your rate and length of service, you can get a cash bonus up to $600 plus 30 days leave with pay.

What does the term "ash can" mean in the Navy?

An "ash can" is a slang term applied to the depth charge used to combat submarines. The average "ash can" is a container filled with approximately 300 pounds of T.N.T. and can be dropped overboard from a ship and so controlled as to explode at depths ranging from 35 to 300 feet. These are generally carried by the fast ships in the fleet as a boat dropping a charge regulated to explode at 70 feet depth must move away from the explosion area at a speed of 25 knots or more. These "ash cans" are either rolled off the stern or shot from "y-guns" which burst one right and one left simultaneously.

Mr. Pilkinton said that he would be in each town on the day and date indicated and that all motorists who failed to purchase the 1942 license while he was in their home community would have to meet him at some other place or apply at the court house at revenue office in Hope sometime before December 31.

The car license paying period will expire midnight, December 31st, and all owners who fail to register their cars for 1942 prior to that date will have to pay a penalty of $3 for each 10 days or fraction, until the license has doubled.

The Hempstead county revenue office is urging all owners to register their cars and trucks as soon as possible to avoid the last minute rush. Many owners have to stand in line to purchase their tags during the last few days of the buying period, because they put off buying until the last minute.

Bring your 1941 registration card, as this contains all the information necessary, if the car or truck is the same as that for which license was purchased last year. If card is lost, then we must have:

Make of car, truck or trailer
Year model
Motor number, car or truck
Serial number trailer
Drivers license number
Save your old aluminum tags for defense, we will see that it gets to the proper place.

the project is assured. The extent of the system can best be visualized when it is considered that to provide service to all outlets contemplated, it will be necessary to lay 77,000 lineal feet of water mains. Figures are not available on the additional lines to be required from the mains to each of the facilities, but it is a safe prediction that plumbers on the project will not be idle for some time to come.

It is expected that the system will be of sufficient capacity to provide service under all conditions and circumstances, but in order to be sure of service in an emergency, there is maintained a standby connection with the municipal water system of Hope comprising an 8 inch pipe line through which sufficient water would be made available in the event of failure of the system at the project.
